Cal EOC Incident – 2014 Drought

SOC / Inland REOC remains activated in support of 2014 Drought

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Medford Weather:

The next front will move into our area late tonight and Sunday. This system will likely bring more wind and less rain than the last system, with gusty winds in most locations. There will be another break in the rain/wind on Monday, and then another moderate to strong system arrives Tuesday. This one looks much wetter and has the potential to be windy as well.

Eureka Weather:

Light showers will diminish through the morning, and will be followed by dry and mild conditions the rest of the day. Additional light rain expected in places Sunday, followed by another dry day Monday. A much more active and wet pattern will develop Tuesday and last through next weekend and possibly beyond.

Reno Weather:

High pressure will keep above normal temperatures in place through the middle of next week. Generally dry conditions are expected, except for possible light showers north of interstate 80 late in the weekend and again by late Tuesday. Later next week, low pressure approaching the west coast may bring a better chance for rain and snow mainly near the Sierras.

Sacramento Weather:

It will be mild & dry today. A weak system arrives Sunday morning with precipitation staying well north of I-80 across Shasta county and adjacent areas. It will dry out on Monday into Tuesday, then wetter again midweek.

San Francisco Weather:

High surf will continue to impact the coast today. Dry weather is expected to prevail district wide through the beginning of next week. Warm temperatures are anticipated for the beginning of the week. Long range forecast models are indicating an increasing possibility of rain for the second half of next week.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Hanford Weather:

Dry weather will continue with seasonal temperatures this weekend and a gradual warming trend through Wednesday. A weather system is expected to move across the region with increased precipitation chances on Thursday and cooler temperatures into next weekend.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

A weak trough will move through the area, bringing slightly cooler weather over the weekend, but temperatures will remain above normal. Well above normal temperatures will return early next week as high pressure builds into the great basin. A weak front will bring cooling for the second half of next week, along with a slight chance of rain north of point conception.

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

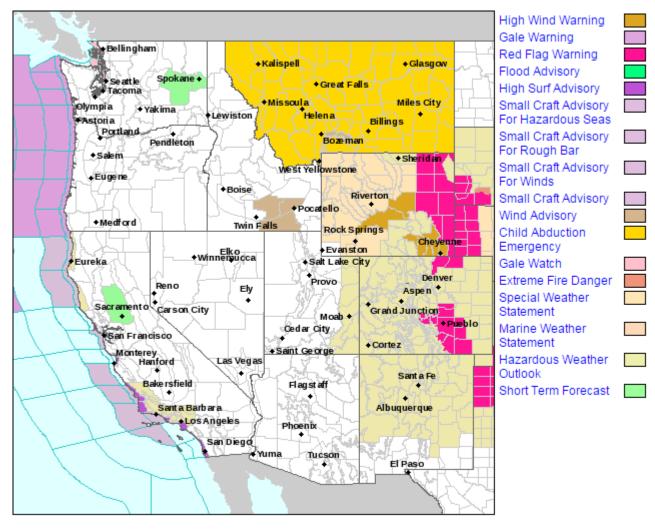

The marine layer and onshore flow will bring areas of night and morning coastal low clouds and fog. High temperatures around 10 degrees above average will continue for inland areas. Weak offshore flow and high pressure aloft is expected to bring the warmest temperatures on Tuesday, a few degrees warmer than Monday. For Wednesday through Friday, high pressure aloft near the west coast will weaken and onshore lower level flow will strengthen. This will bring inland cooling, more coastal low clouds and fog, and gusty west winds in the mountains and deserts.

Southeast California Weather:

A system moving through the area on Monday may bring slightly cooler and breezier conditions to the region early next week. Otherwise, warm and mainly dry conditions will continue through next week across the area.
